We regret to have to record the sudden death of Mr Alexander Gillanders, chief engineer of the Kist Point Refinery. Mr Gillanders met with an accident about five weeks ago, the result of which was a compound fracture of the left leg below the knee. An amputation was decided upon about a month age, and the patient was regarded as being out of all danger. Quite unexpectedly he was found early this morning to have tad a relapse, and notwithstanding every hing that could be done It is believed that the Right Honourab e for him by the able and attentive staff of the Civil Hospital, he died about five p'olook, from failure of the heart. Mr Gillauders was one of our old residents, having arrived here carly in the sixties, and had a varied experience in the East. Ir will be seen from a report in another part of the paper that Mr P. Easlemont. M.P., raised a question in the House of Commons in regard to the endowment of the Church of England in Hongkong and received the very satisfactory reply that the Colonial Government had been informed that the decision announced in 1881 (the discontinuance of the ecclesiastical grant) cannot be departed from. The days of special ecclementical favours are over.

We understand that the Hongkong Gowernment have received intimation that the to consider their judgment. The question' Secretary of State for the Colonies Ordinance. This sauction ought to disarm and the case took the form of an application opposition, and we suppose will render the Government indispused to accept Mr Whitehead's bill prolonging the time of coming into force of the Ordinance, although the position of the supporters of the Ordinance is so strong that two months' delay would not have affected them. The wheest course for the militant shipowners is to quietly accept the Ordinance and adapt their trade to it. They will find that they will lose nothing in the long ran, perhaps gain a good deal.

The Coulow Times of 15th inst. says :-The appouncement of the suspension of the firm of Messis Alstons, Scott & Co. of more yesterday than express our astonish-Minister (drawing his chair sightly ment, and great regret at the failure of d such a long-established and much-esteemed Patrick, are dead, Mr James Alston, of Mesara Alston Hamilton & Co. of London was no that high (laying his hand on the ficent coffee plantations in the Haputale district, properties which at one time were said to be bringing in a clear £30.0 0 a year and which must be still very valuable possessions: whilst these whose recollection takes them back to the time of the American war will remember that the firm made largely by the purchase and shipment of Indian cotton. The present members of culties are Messre H. C. Buchanan, F. Minister; This trial : the action for | W. Bois, W. Girson; and W. H. Alston, with Messra Percy and Stanley Bois assistants signing per pro. All these gentlemen are too well-known to need further reference other than to sympathies with them under the misfortune which has so unexpectedly and undeservedly, befallen their firm, and to wish the two last-named every aucress in the reconstructed house of Messrs Bois Brothers & Company. Mr H U. Buchanan is the only partner of the old firm tin Cevion. Mr Fred. Bois being aw y in Europe. Mr Stanley Bois has been up to Calcutta to arrange no doubt with Mesars. 'Unique' writes from Singapore to the Broad Arrow on the subject of the General at biogapore, and after reciting the facts states :-- We are all aware that the A.D.C. was lent to the Governor notwithstanding the pencity of officers for military work, on pertain conditions, and as those c nditions were not complied with, and as the necessities of the military service required the return of this officer to regimental duty; he was brought back accordingly. If garrison were concerned in it. The General 1st. P. T. In this action he received the approbation of all right-thinking members of the community. It would be difficult to find in any part of Her Majesty's kingdon or dominions a harder-working, more zealous, or more just officer, one who i ever ready to maintain the high character and position of Har Majesty's officers and who has raised the atation in military point of view to the high position it now occupies; all this means good and hard work, which he expects all to share with him. This may to some extent be re sented by the Queen's hard bargains who probably form your complaining correspon dents, but those who share the sentiment of Nelson re-echoed by Warren, tha

THE EGYPTIAN EXILES IN CEYLON.

A DISAGREEMENT AMONGST THE PASHAS.

The Coulon Times says :- Wi h regard to the recent agitation in P rliment about the Egyptian exiles in Caylon, there seems to be a very general impression abread that he Pashas are unanimous in desiring to eare the island of Orvion to which they were banished by the Egyptian Government after the rebellion of 1883; but, judging from what Mah mood Fehmy Pasha communicated to our representative in the course of an interview, this is not so. Mahamood Fehrny Pasha declared at once that he was very well in health, that the climate of Ceylon suited him admirably, and that he did not in the least share Arabi Pasha's wish to quit the island; in fact, his desire is that the English Government will leave him where he is. The allowance made to him of £37 10s per month enables him to live very comfortably in his retired suburban residence where he has passed the last few years, and here, he says, he is quite prepared to remain till he dies. The Khedive has declared he will not have the exiles back in Egypt, and, for himself, Mahamo d Febry does not want to go. " Here," he said, pointing to his study, you see my liame. Here is my library (pointing to a case containing a number of books) and here is my work, pointing to a tremendous pile of foolscap on the pag a of which were inscribed a number of characters in Arabic. This, it seems, is an Arabian version of the history of the world, on which the Pasha has been engaged ever since he came to Ceylon and which he intends to complete this year. The history. 1st P. T. O. (anticipating the other): firm, dating as it does from the early is a translation of a number of other him. World,' Redlin's History, and Ward and Lock's History ; while he has translated a number of passages from other books dealing with special su jects, such har the History of Egypt &co. He has also devoteda good deal of his time to translating the History of the Bible into Arabic, and tol learning the S phalese and Tamil languages, which he speaks well. This occupation has kept him fully em ployed, at it he desires to continue, and with the sgitation got up at home by Eirl de la Warr he has no sympathy whatever. Why, too, Arabi should fancy Cyprus, ho cannot understand in the least: His exchief, he argues, knows nothing whatever about the place and the climate, whereas he (Mahamood Fehmy) has read a great deal concerning it, and what he has read has not been favorable. The idea of any of them going back to Egypt he admits is ridiculous, and moreover he says that Arsbi could not possibly live there if he went back, owing to the feelings that a number of Arabi's uwn relations still entertain towards him. He contends that the health of all the exiles is good, and says that he stated so to the ductors forming the two medical boards that recontly examined them on behalf of the home Government. while the illness which Arabi claims to suffer from he evidently regards as to a great extent imaginary, and one that is made capital out of for the benefit of travelling M. P.s and the passengers who visit him, but not likely to blind the medical men whose duty it was to send a report home. One naturally asks why, if Arabi and his friends say the climate of Columbo is too moist, ther do not proceed to Jatina or some other dry place in Coylon and the reply is that Arabi siways mukes out that he has not money enough to travel about in this way, though Arabi gets £12 10s. a month more than he (Mahamood Fehmy) does. Arabi now has set his heart on going to either Cyprus or Syria, and nothing slee will suit him. A good plan, Fehmy Pasha argues. would be to offer him the chance of going to Australia or some place like that, and one would very soon see the exrebel turn round and refuse to quit Ceylon. Hewever, we need not make show up Arabi and his. g ievances. Suffice it that the former is very well content to remain where he is; and that he desires nothing better than to pass his time in Ceylon in company with his wife and one of his sons, who is training for the medical profession, and in watching from here the progress of his two elder sons who are in the service of the Khedive of Egypt. He is a good old soldier, who evidently recognises that his fighting days are over, and who is very well pleased that his eratwhile enemies and conquerors have not condemned him to pass the rest of his days in a worse place than Ceylon. Whatever may be done with Arabi and the other exiles who follow his le d. he hopes he will be allowed to remain where he is an expression of opinion which, coming from one of the ex les, ought to have due weight at home when their case is being considered.
